Reunion of Confederate Veterans at New Orleans

AN ENVIALE BODYGUARD
General Julian S. Carr, former Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans, marching with a bevy of charming maids of honor during the annual parade of the veterans at New Orleans April 13.

THE recent reunion of Confederate veterans at New Orleans, La., was one of the most spirited and interesting in the history of the organization. The people of the city gave the convention a rousing welcome and did all in their power to make the occasion memorable. An element of controversy was introduced into the sessions by the injection of the question of the Ku Klux Klan, concerning which the convention seemed divided. Many declared their adhesion to and approval of the organization, while others were quite as vehement in opposition. The debate ended when a delegate from Jackson, Tenn., leaped to his feet and declared that he was unalterably opposed "to lug- ging anything of that kind into the discussion."

General W. B. Haldeman of Louisville, Ky., was elected Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans, succeeding General Julian S. Carr. W. McDonald Lee was re-elected Commander-in-Chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans. He defeated B. H. Richardson, Commander of Camp Beauregard, New Orleans, by a vote of 243 to 51. Lee is said to have had the support of those who favored the Ku Klux Klan.

The convention adopted resolutions asking that the Sons of Confederate Veterans continue as a separate organization, so that when the last of the 64,000 veterans now alive should be gone they might shoulder the burden of setting forth in its true light what the South fought for in the sixties.

A motion was uproariously and unanimously adopted banning forever the use of the terms "Johnny Reb" and "Rebels" by Southerners when referring to Confederate soldiers.

A veteran said to be more than 90 years old handed to the secretary a resolution which would have ordered appointment of a committee of three to meet a similar committee from the G. A. R. to perfect arrangements for joint reunions in the future. The resolution, however, was not passed.

Dr. George Harding, father of President Harding, addressed the convention twice. He said he thought Robert E. Lee the greatest of American Generals and Jefferson Davis one of the country's greatest statesmen. He said he felt kindly toward the South, inasmuch as his grandmother was a cousin of Davis's mother. He declared he wanted a reunion of the Blue and Gray in Washington next year, if possible.

After thanking the veterans for the way in which he had been received, he added:

"I want to thank the Southern people, too, for the way they have treated my son. The South never had a better friend than Warren G. Harding."

They had just played a few sets back of the Fairbanks Studio. (Wide World Photos.)

STARS may come and stars may go, but Charlie Chaplin and Doug Fairbanks go on forever in the affections of the devotees of the screen, to whom they have brought so much in the way of fun and thrills. Sheer joy in living has seldom been better illustrated than in this picture of the famous pair taken with Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr.

ASTONISHING DEFTNESS

Nature has a way of making compensations to those whom she has deprived of some essential. The blind, for instance, have a wonderful delicacy of touch. The armless boy here presented has made up for what seemed at first sight an irreparable loss by making his feet take the place of hands and do almost everything that hands could do.

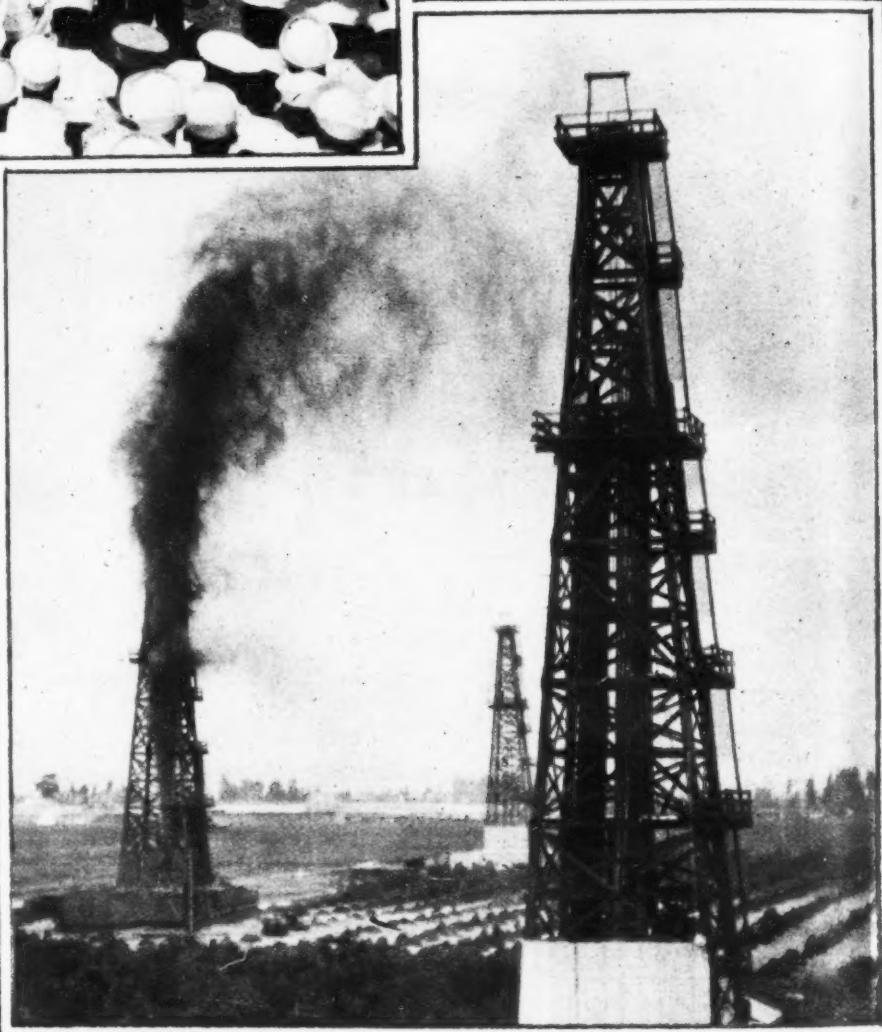

MONSTER AIRCRAFT

The entire frame of the giant dirigible ZR-1, under construction by the United States Naval Air Force, is in place with the single exception of the nose, which is being erected on the floor and will be hoisted into position in a day or so. Work has been started on the outer covering of the huge ship, which will be composed of BB balloon fabric specially treated with acetone, a chemical which will render it impervious to weather.

The sixty-two fuel tanks, each with a capacity of 5,420 gallons of gasoline, are being placed in position alongside the corridor which runs from bow to stern of the aircraft. Sixteen of the tanks will be detachable so that they can be dropped in case of an emergency. Twenty ordinary water ballast tanks, each with a capacity of 2,200 gallons, also are being installed.

The builders are speeding construction to be ready for the trial flight scheduled for early in July. Work on the great gas bags, constructed on gold beaters' skin, is being hurried.

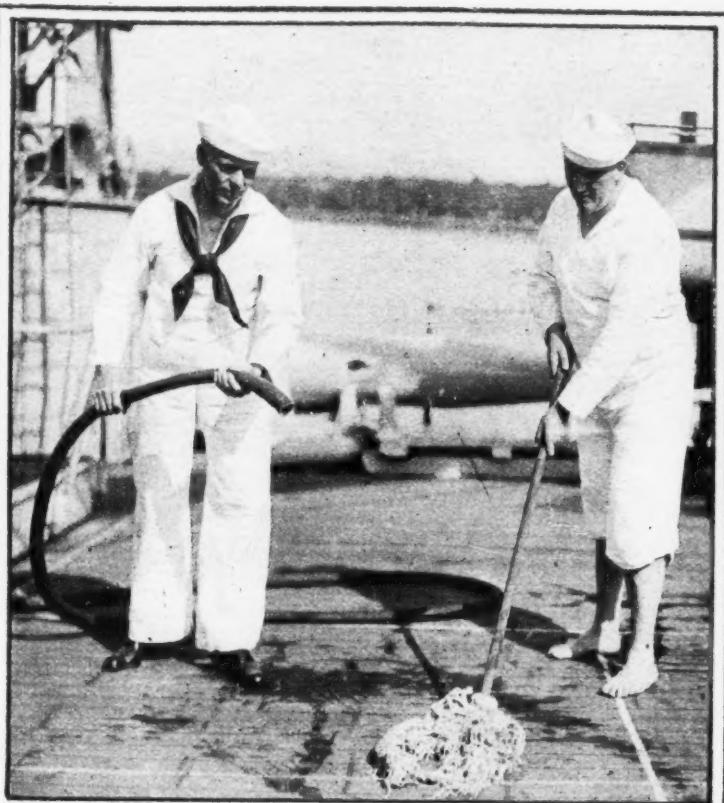

Officers on duty at the gigantic hangar here have been notified that the six gondolas which will carry the six engines of 300 horsepower each that will furnish motive power for the ZR-1 are nearing completion in the aircraft factory at Philadelphia.

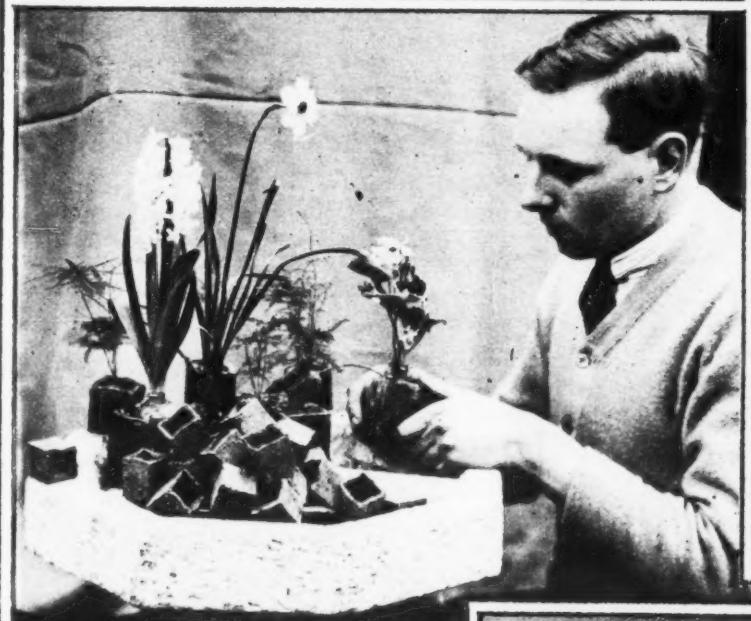

GAS GUSHER HURLS SAND 250 FEET IN THE AIR
Emitting a flow of gas at such terrific pressure that sand, rocks and mud were hurled into the air a distance of 250 feet, this gas gusher at Santa Fé Springs, Cal., baffled for many hours all attempts of expert oil drillers to shut it off. Boards were torn from the derrick like so much match wood. (P. & A. Photos.)

DOES WONDERFUL THINGS WITH HIS FEET

WINS 54 SCOUT BADGES
A Boy Scout for the country to be proud of is Thomas McConville, 17 years old, the ranking Eagle Boy Scout of Washington, who has won 54 of the possible 62 badges which a member of the organization can earn. (© Underwood & Underwood.)

THE greatest asset of a country is a high standard of citizenship. It is this fact that gives so much importance to the Boy Scout movement, which is training a host of clean-living, upstanding, healthy minded and healthy bodied young men to be the future rulers of this country. A fine example of the class of boys the organization is turning out is the young Boy Scout pictured on these pages with the fifty-four badges out of the possible sixty-two that he has earned because of his devotion to the objects for which the Boy Scouts stand. An executive of the organization has recently declared that young McConville if placed on a desert island would be more apt to survive than any other. In the photograph he is seen not only with his badges but with the flag which was presented to him recently by the Daughters of the American Revolution for service during the arms conference last year at Washington.

PIRATES OFF COAST?

Believed by customs and Coast Guard officials to be another victim of liquor pirates, a two-masted schooner was discovered, with sails set and dragging at her anchor, two miles southeast of Whistling Buoy, just off Point Lookout, at the entrance of Great South Bay, at dawn April 15 by the Coast Guard cutter Manhattan, in command of Captain M. J. Ryan. Nobody was found on board, and there was evidence of a fierce battle having taken place on deck. The condition of the cabins of the skipper and his crew, with clothing scattered all over the floors, indicated that they had not given much advance thought to their departure.

The schooner was brought into the slip of the United States Barge Office at the Battery by the cutter. During the day a closer examination was made by Captain Ryan, who said that the bullet holes and the empty rifle cartridge shells on the deck indicated a battle in which, obviously, the pirates won over the crew of the vessel. The opinion was expressed in one quarter that the skipper, his mate and crew, probably eight men, had been slain in the encounter and their bodies thrown overboard. There was not a drop of whisky on board, but in the schooner's hold were many pieces of burlap such as is used in wrapping up packages of whisky, and a great many empty whisky cases. Moreover, sheets of paper found on board, one torn from a memorandum book, indicated that the schooner was engaged in the liquor traffic.

The deck of the schooner furnished the best evidence that the crew had been engaged in a terrific battle, probably with liquor pirates, and that any liquor that had not been disposed of at the time of the raid had been taken by the thieves. Many empty cartridge shells, .44 calibre, of British make, were found on the deck, and here and there were found bullet holes which might have been from the weapons of the raiders. Ropes on the deck had been cut with a sharp axe, which was found on board. Belaying pins had been taken from their places and scattered about the deck.

THROWING HIS RIDER
One of the dangers that attend steeple-chasing is illustrated by this snapshot of R. W. Hall-Dare falling in front of his mount, King Spider, in the Life Guards chase at the Household Brigade meet at Hawthorne Hill, England, recently. The desperate attempt that the rider is making to save himself and escape the flying hoofs of his mount is strikingly pictured. His competitor at left seems to find considerable amusement in the incident. Fortunately the rider escaped uninjured. (Wide World Photos.)

Winchell Smith, the well-known playwright, modeled in bronze bas-relief by Charles Laite. The likeness is striking.

WHILE the Washington conference on disarmament made a great reduction in the naval armament of the nations concerned and adopted certain restrictions on the use of poison-gas and submarines, the science of aviation was left unfettered, and all nations since then have made marked strides in the effort to obtain supremacy in the air. Our own country has not been deficient in this respect, and remarkable developments have been made in every branch of the aviation service. This includes size of machines, cruising radius, maneuverability, speed in taking off from the ground and the power and perfection of the engines employed. In the latter feature a record was attained when the engine of a seaplane was kept continuously running at a speed of seventy-five miles an hour for 600 hours. The notable character of this achievement is best appreciated when it is realized that this is equivalent to furnishing continuous power for two and a half trips around the world. It is becoming more and more apparent that the warfare of the future will take place in the air and that some of the greatest achievements of man in peace will also be registered there.

DRUG SEIZURES

Deadlier even than the liquor habit are the effects of habit-forming drugs, the growth of which has been sufficient to excite the alarm of Federal, State and municipal authorities. It is a trade that is exceedingly difficult to stop, for the reason that it is carried on surreptitiously and that the deadly narcotics can be compressed in so small a compass that they are not liable to be detected. The comparatively recent death of a well-known motion-picture actor on the Pacific Coast as a result of his addiction to drugs will be readily recalled, and his case is only one of countless thousands of less conspicuous lives ruined by indulgence in the terrible habit. In the City of New York over 2,400 raids upon dealers in illicit drugs were made during one year and when it is realized that this represents about seven different seizures every day for the entire period a glimpse is given of the extensive spread of the traffic. It is gratifying to know that the authorities are fully alive to the necessity of checking this baneful indulgence which strikes at the very vigor and virility of the nation.

CHERRY BLOSSOMS

Washington is always beautiful in the Spring and nowhere more beautiful than in the vicinity of the Tidal Basin, where are planted the cherry trees presented by the Emperor of Japan to Mrs. Taft when she occupied the White House as "the first lady in the land." Every year they burst into bloom and make the vicinity a palace of enchantment. The fame of their beauty is so great that hundreds of visitors come to Washington each Spring from long distances for no other purpose than to revel in the feast they afford to the eye. They are the favorite bloom of Japan. It has been said that there are three things in Japan that are sacred, namely, Buddha, children and cherry blossoms. So that the Japanese Emperor could have made no more choice and delicate gift than that of these beautiful cherry trees.

THE baseball season of 1923 began in the National League on April 17 and in the American League on the 18th. Never before in the history of baseball has so much enthusiasm been manifested in the pennant races of both leagues. Immense crowds turned out in every city of both circuits. The Giants got off on the right foot in Boston by winning from the Braves by the score of 4 to 1. Brooklyn and Philadelphia battled fourteen innings to a tie score of 5 to 5. Perhaps the greatest interest was manifested at the

BIGGEST THRONG IN THE HISTORY OF BASEBALL CROWD TO CAPACITY

Over 74,000 people welcomed the opportunity to witness not only the first game of the American League but the first game of the National League in the world. No such crowd has ever witnessed a baseball game in this country. Had there been more room in the stadium, the gates had to be closed some time before Yankee-Red Sox game in New York City, chiefly on account of the fact that it was the first game that had ever been played in the new Yankee stadium. The greatest crowd that ever saw a baseball game numbered 74,200 people, who sat and stood in this greatest of all baseball enclosures. Had there been room the crowd would have exceeded 100,000, as more than 25,000 were turned away. The game was a rattling one from start to finish and replete with thrills. Its most notable feature was the savage home run clouted by "Babe" Ruth in the third inning with two team mates on the base lines. This settled the game, which was won by the Yankees, 4 to 1.

SENSITIVE RADIO SET

Mr. Kenneth Harkness, Chief Engineer of the Radio Guild, New York City, shown with the new receiving set designed by him, which is so sensitive that it picks up broadcast concerts on the three-inch coil of wire used as the aerial. Signals from Schenectady have been heard in New York City clearly on a loud speaker. Eighty-five feet of wire, spider-web wound, are used in the construction of the coil aerial. The tendency in radio is more and more to reduce the size of the aerials without impairing the efficiency of the set, and the time may yet come when a set answering all practical purposes may be carried in a vest pocket.

CANINE RADIO FAN

Skeeter, as this dog is named, belongs to C. D. Gallagher of Minneapolis, Minn. He is an ardent devotee of radio and will sit for hours at the receiving set taking in all the programs. Whenever loud music is played Skeeter joins in with a howl more notable for its vehemence than its melody.

Trial of Russian Priests Whose Tragic Climax Has Shocked the World

ABOVE is shown the group of Russian ecclesiastics recently placed on trial by the Soviet Government on the ground of willful opposition to the Government's measures. In the centre of the first row is Archbishop Zepiak (1) and second from the right, seated, is Vicar General Butchavitch (2). A great sensation was caused when it was announced that these two eminent prelates had been condemned to death. Later it was learned that the death sentence of Archbishop Zepiak had been commuted to ten years' imprisonment, and it was hoped that a similar commutation would be granted in the case of Vicar General Butchavitch. Consternation was caused all over the world by the announcement on April 3 that the latter had been executed by a firing squad. The secrecy that surrounds Soviet executions makes uncertain the circumstances under which the sentence was executed, but it seems probable that Mgr. Butchavitch was put to death in the Moscow Prison for the Condemned, to which he had been removed after the reprieve was refused. Appeals from the outside world which had poured in upon

the Soviet authorities had no effect in staying the hand of the executioners. Competent opinion indeed is that even the breaking of diplomatic relations by other Governments or a threat of war would not have moved the Moscow officials from their course. Their last word in the case had been spoken, it appears, when they commuted Archbishop Zepiak's sentence. The prelate who has been put to death was Father Superior of the Church of St. Catherine in Petrograd. He held the title of Domestic Prelate to His Holiness, granted by the Pope for special services. He was 65 years of age and came from an old and wealthy family of Polish origin, although he himself was a Russian citizen. Mgr. Butchavitch bore himself with marked serenity throughout the ordeal.

Treasures You Never Can Replace

A cherished silver heirloom—would you scour it with grit?

Any treasure you cannot replace deserves careful cleaning—and the precious thin enamel of your teeth is one of the greatest treasures you have. Once scratched or worn away by gritty dentifrices even Nature can never replace tooth enamel or restore its beauty.

Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream is the safe dentifrice and it is recommended by more Dentists than any other.

Its non-gritty precipitated chalk loosens clinging particles from the enamel. Pure and mild, its vegetable-oil soap gently washes them away.

A tube for each member of the family is a sound investment in sound teeth. Large tube 25c.

Comfortable New Shoes for Pleasant Spring Days

when the whole world stretches out before you like a green carpet.

APPY Spring days, full of warmth, sunshine and activity! On such days wouldn't you like to feel "foot-free," knowing no restraint, finding springy ease in every step as you refresh your spirits with wonderful walks under soft, sunny skies?

It is unnecessary to pamper your feet in old shoes at this glorious time of year. In new Cantilever Shoes you can walk with foot freedom and unusual comfort.

Cantilevers give you unusual comfort because they are built to act with the foot as well as to fit it. They have a flexible shank that curves up to follow the curve of your arch and support it without restricting its natural movement. This allows the muscles of your foot to strengthen through exercise so that they can perform their intended function of holding the bones of the foot in a springy, arched formation. The natural lines of Cantilever Shoes allow for ample toe room and the well-set low, medium or Cuban heel keeps your body healthfully and gracefully poised.

Cantilevers are made of light-weight, soft leathers in a number of attractive styles. They are in harmony with smart Spring costumes and are decidedly in vogue with that charming type of active woman who demands trim good looks as well as comfort in her footwear.

Every pair of Cantilevers is trademarked to protect you. Except in New York City and Chicago there is only one store in each town. If no Cantilever dealer in the list at the left is near you, write the manufacturers, Morse & Burt Co., 11 Carlton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., for the name and address of one who is more conveniently located, and for a new booklet about feet and shoes.

The Cantilever Shoe is endorsed by Women's Colleges, Women's Clubs,
 Public Health Authorities, Physicians,
 Osteopaths, Directors of Physical Education,
 Editors, Stage Celebrities and prominent women everywhere
